Jacqueline was born in New York City in 1962. She grew up in a working-class family, and she learned the value of hard work and determination from a young age. She attended public schools and went on to earn a degree in political science from Queens College. After graduating from college, Jacqueline worked as a social worker for several years before deciding to pursue a career in law.

Jacqueline attended law school at night while working full-time. She graduated from law school in 1992 and went on to work for a legal aid society. In 1994, she was elected to the New York State Assembly, where she served for 12 years. During her time in the Assembly, Jacqueline was a leading advocate for women's rights and social justice issues.

In 2006, Jacqueline was elected to the New York State Senate. She is the first Italian-American woman to serve in the New York State Senate. In the Senate, Jacqueline has continued to be a strong advocate for women's rights and social justice issues. She is also a member of the Senate's Judiciary Committee, where she has worked to reform the criminal justice system.

Jacqueline is a role model for young girls everywhere. She shows that anything is possible if you work hard and never give up on your dreams. She is an inspiration to all who know her, and her story is one that will continue to be told for generations to come.
