How to Start Conversations

One of the biggest challenges of making new friends is starting conversations. It can be intimidating to approach someone you don't know, but it's important to remember that everyone has been in your shoes at some point. Just take a deep breath and give it a try.

Here are a few tips for starting conversations:

- Find common ground. The easiest way to start a conversation is to find something you have in common with the other person. This could be anything from your interests to your work or your hometown.
- Ask questions. Asking questions is a great way to show interest in the other person and keep the conversation going. Ask about their hobbies, their job, or their family.
- Be yourself. Don't try to be someone you're not. People can tell when you're being fake, and it will make it harder to build a genuine connection.

How to Build Lasting Relationships

Once you've started a few conversations, the next step is to build lasting relationships. This takes time and effort, but it's worth it. Here are a few tips for building lasting relationships:

- Be a good listener. One of the most important things you can do in a friendship is to be a good listener. This means paying attention to what the other person is saying, and showing that you care about what they have to say.
- Be supportive. Friends are there for each other through thick and thin. Be supportive of your friends, even when they're going through a tough time.

- Be consistent. Friendships require consistency. Make an effort to stay in touch with your friends, even when you're busy.
